THE ENGINEERING SIMULATION PATH TO DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION

Digital transformation is key to future success

The 2019 CAE Conference will illustrate how and where engineering simulation, already pervasive in design and production processes and in the use of products themselves, is inextricably linked to the other Industry 4.0 technologies. One could even say that Engineering Simulation's role is central to Industry 4.0 and digital transformation.

This year's CAE Conference will illustrate how engineering simulation can be used in different productive contexts to orchestrate a successful and considered path towards effective digital transformation.

Nurturing a culture of engineering simulation starts with university students and in universities

Engineering simulation has to potential to provide a measured and virtually tested path to digital transformation.

Nurturing a culture of engineering simulation starts with university students and in universities.

The Poster Awards, which recognize and reward the creative use of CAE technology around the world, is intended to bridge the gap between the academic and industrial worlds, by providing a forum to connect innovative new young thinkers in engineering with industrial enterprises that have an ever-increasing need for these skills.
